

Phanes Group commitment against COVID-19

As the COVID-19 situation evolves rapidly in many countries, the health and safety of our employees and their families, our clients, and our partners, remain our highest priority.

The situation around COVID-19 is developing rapidly in many countries in which Phanes Group operates. Our employees are adapting to new realities and are finding ways to pursue our mission and vision for our partners and the communities which we serve.

As it has always, the health and safety of our employees and their families, our clients, and our partners, remain our highest priority. In line with the requirements and recommendations of local authorities, we have reinforced preventive and protective measures.

As a business we have always tried to ensure we have business continuity in place so as not to hinder our clients, projects and our teams. Most of our staff are now working from home and are equipped with collaborative digital tools so that our work continues as normal.

We assess the situation daily to adapt our procedures to the local realities and the recommendations of the various authorities. Ensuring all information is communicated to our team effectively.

We are confident that together we will overcome this crisis and get back to our normal activities as quickly as possible.

Our thoughts are with those directly affected by the novel coronavirus and the brave healthcare workers worldwide who are fighting this pandemic from the front line.

We thank all our stakeholders for their trust and support.

Martin Haupt
CEO Phanes Group